

Study Tips: Project Resource Management

Know the components that make up the resource management plan. Think of your own project teams to help relate how you acquire the resources and interact with the team throughout the project.

Developing your project team is an important concept for the exam. Refer to the handout for this chapter since some of the concepts are not included in the PMBOK® Guide.

If you're not familiar with the motivational theories, you may want to memorize them and write them on your "brain dump sheet" to use as reference during the exam.

Understand the ways to resolve conflict on your project team. Imagine using these techniques on your own team.
